Headline:

Rather cloudy with patchy rain. Breezy.

Today:

Early rain across the far northeast soon clearing to leave a mild, rather cloudy day with, especially across the north and west, patchy rain. Some brighter or sunnier spells developing across eastern parts. Fresh westerly winds, occasionally strong in north.

Tonight:

Some clear spells across the east but generally cloudy with patchy rain across the north and west. More persistent, locally heavy rain expected to reach Shetland and Lewis towards dawn.

Thursday:

Some brightness at first in east, otherwise cloudy with outbreaks of rain spreading south, most persistent in the north and west. Becoming brighter with a few showers in north later.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:

A few showers across Shetland Friday, otherwise dry with sunny spells. Dry, bright start Saturday but generally unsettled this weekend with outbreaks of rain, heaviest and most persistent in west.
